

Magic Mirror

The Lost Suits

Magic Mirror

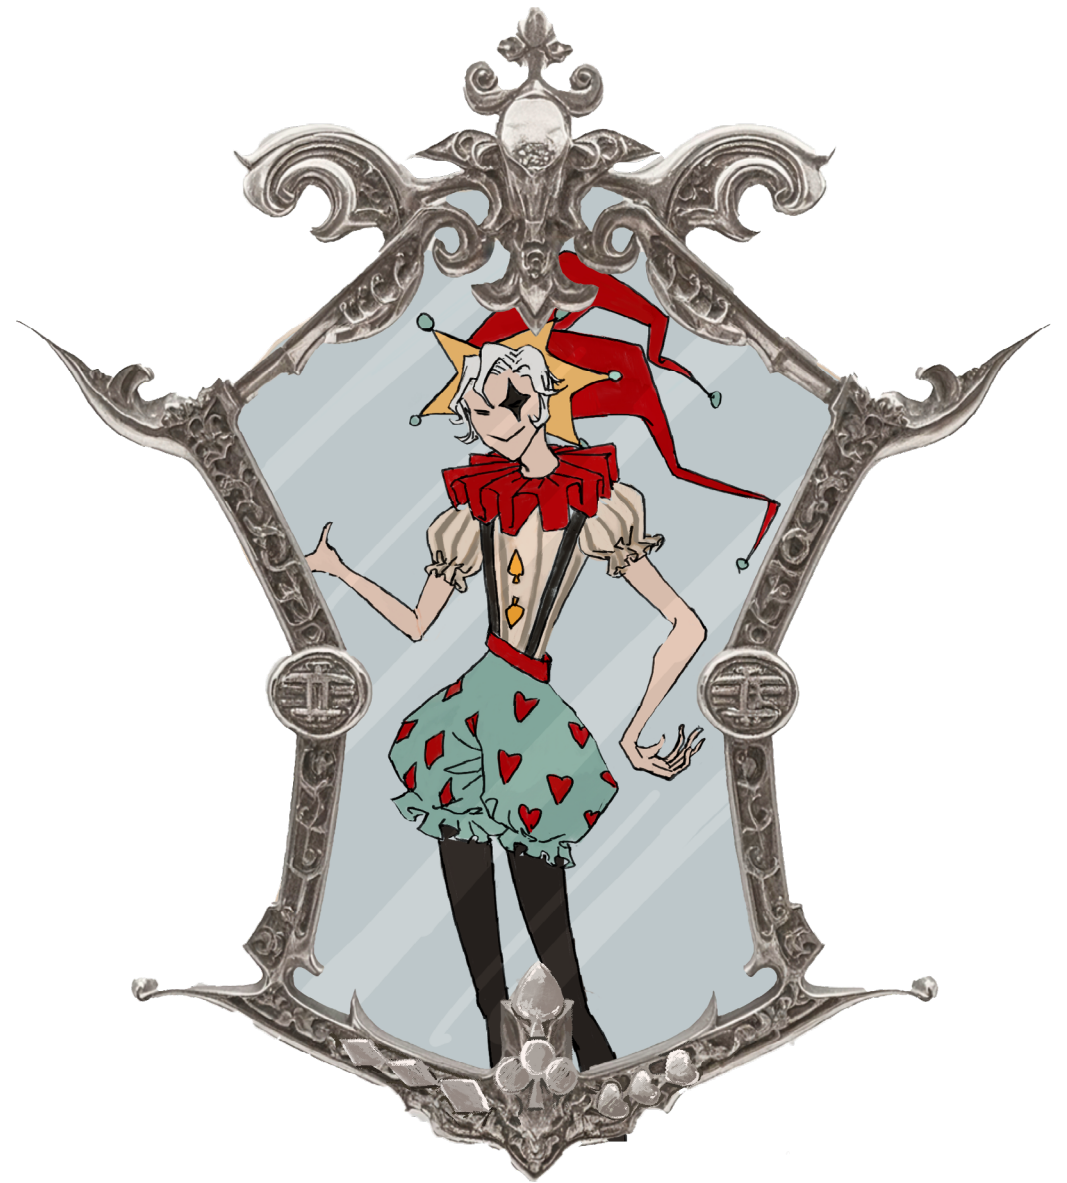

You play as the Joker from the French deck.

You accidentally broke a magic mirror that shows the world of all playing cards. You soon learn that this mirror held the history of all cards.

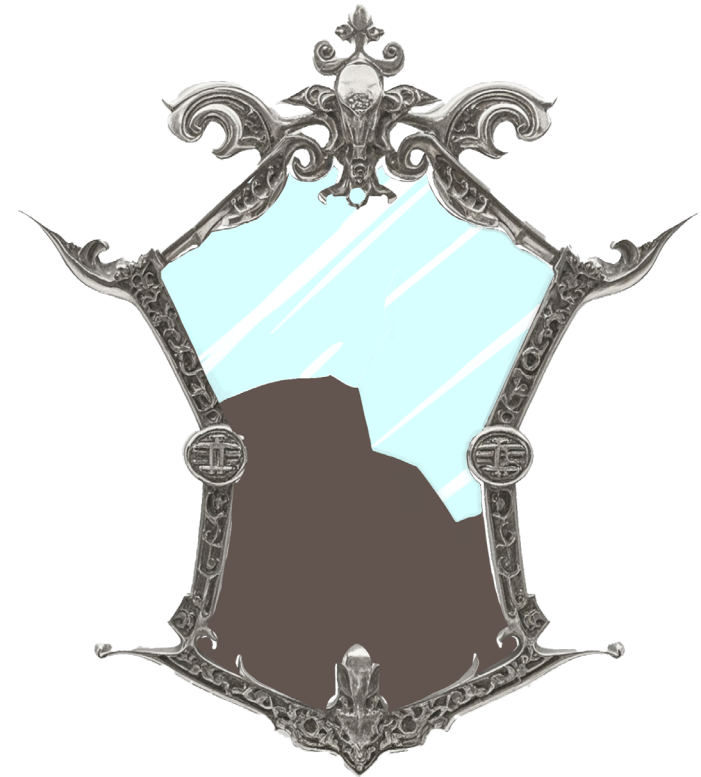

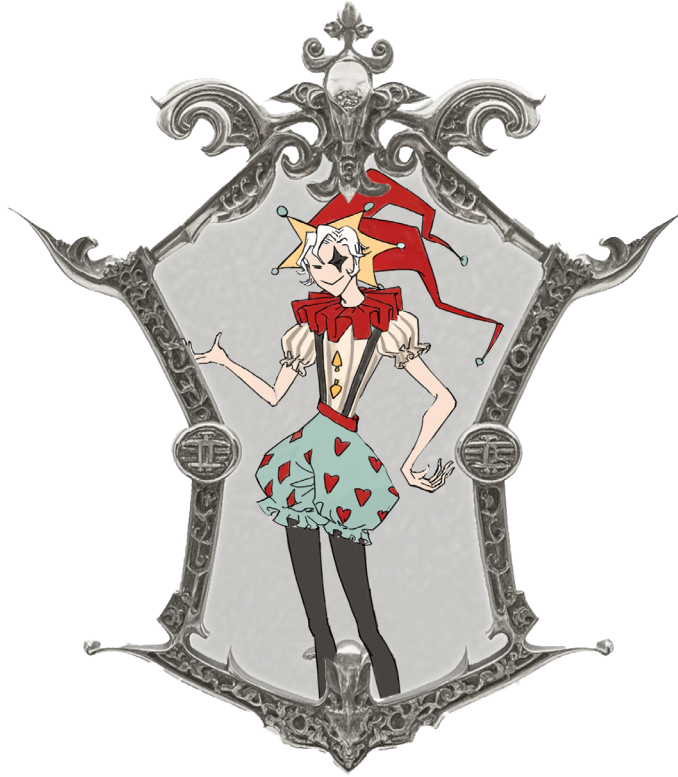

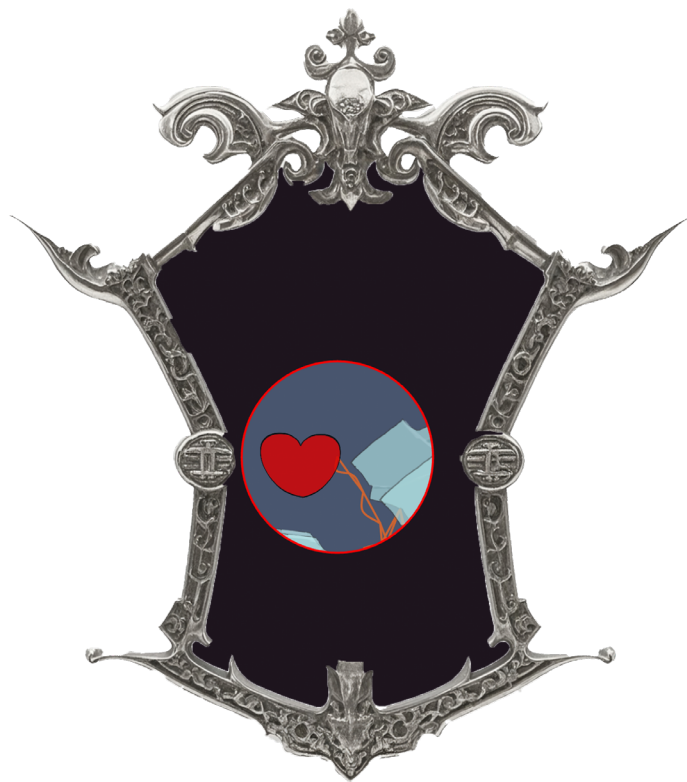

Your mission is to explore this broken world. Each piece of the mirror is a doorway to a different world, showing a card deck from a different time and place.

You will start in the world you know with Hearts, Spades, Diamonds, and Clubs. From there, you will travel back in time to find where playing cards began. You must travel through these amazing new worlds: from the story-filled worlds of «Cups» and «Swords» in old Italian and Spanish decks, to the living forests of «Acorns» and «Leaves» in German decks, and even older cards.

Your final goal is to collect all these «suit pieces» from different places, use them to mend the magic mirror's cracks, and put the long history of playing cards back together..

The Interface - Key visuals

User Journey

Players use a “mirror” to become card characters.
They travel into worlds inside the mirror to find and collect card suits from different times in history.

Field observations

My research is based on the fact that character cards (K, Q, J) come from real historical figures. Today, these once-living people are just static 2D patterns, as if “trapped” in the cards.

I use an interactive mirror to let players operate and these characters with their body poses. The characters stop being static patterns and become “historical guides”. They lead players back to their respective eras, allowing us to review and trace the complete history of card suits.

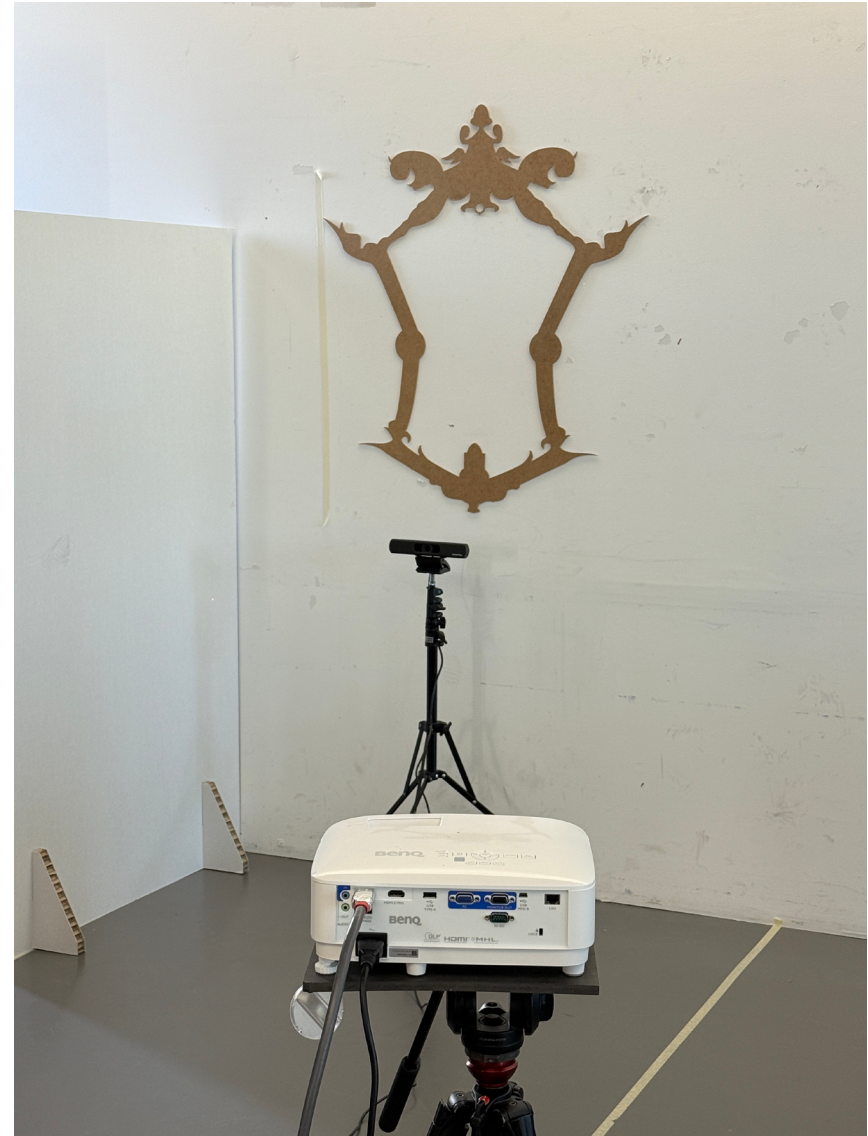

User Tests

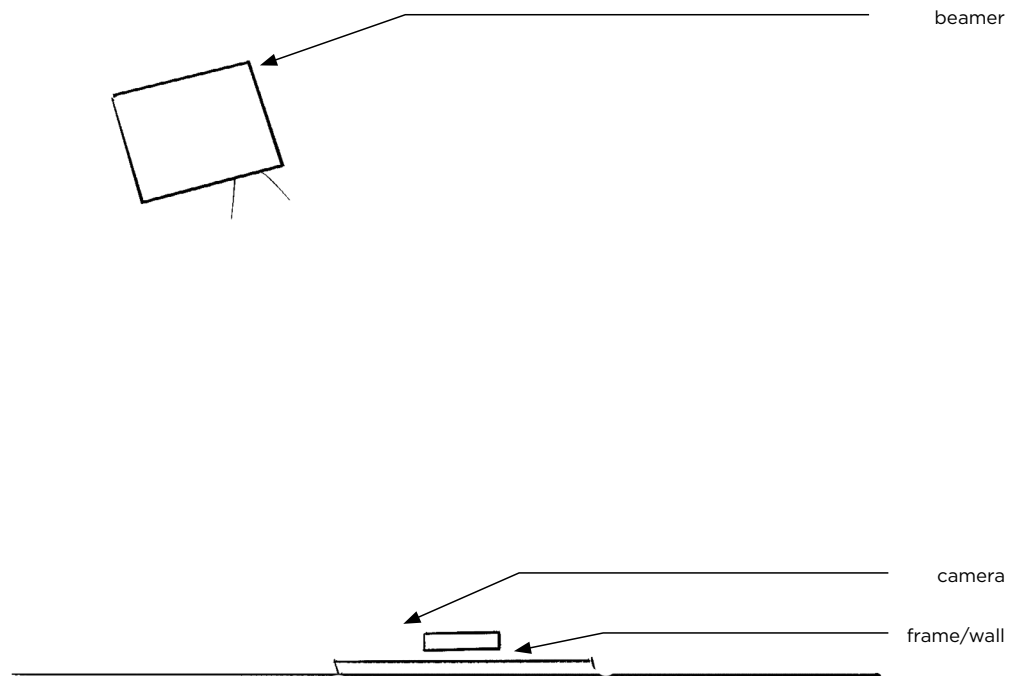

Feedback from early testing indicated that users were unfamiliar with the game mechanics and somewhat unclear about the purpose of the game

Scenography

Spatial diagram

Technical diagram

Computer
Webcam
Beamer
HDMI
USB lines

